Alerting Abstract CA A1

NOVELTY - The electronic coupon providing system provides discounts on the first product to a customer who purchases a number of cross-marketed products. The point of sale terminal (86) consists of a discount issued database stores the discounts (87-89,91,92), coupled to a processor. The processor calculates the first discount available, and any subsequent discounts, based on the customer's purchase of a cross-marketed product. A database controller adds the discounts together to ascertain the total discount available.

USE - For the control of generation and redemption of discount coupons for multiple vendors.

ADVANTAGE - The system allows merchant vendors to associate issued coupons specifically to an individual customer. The system also allows the discounts accumulated by one type of product purchase to be added to another type of product purchase discount.

Alerting Abstract WO A1

The device includes a nozzle for dispensing fuel. A controller in communication with the nozzle for selectively allowing the nozzle to dispense the fuel. An optical reader is connected to the controller for reading optical data provided by a user and transferring the optical data to the controller. Upon receipt of the optical data, the controller accesses a record associated with the optical data and allows the nozzle to dispense the fuel. The record is a billing account to which an amount associated with the dispensed fuel is provided. The account is either a credit account or a debit account. The record designates a discount for adjusting a price associated with the dispensed fuel. The record stores information from the dispensing for later retrieval.

ABSTRACT

PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED: To provide a system that simultaneously makes a sponsor make contributions to a volunteer group; each time there is a response e-mail to a questionnaire, and collects information using email forwarding.

SOLUTION: The information collection system, using e-mail forwarding, is for collecting the information needed for a company or an organization on a Web, while associating it with volunteer activities and social contributions. A server system includes an e-mail distribution means for distributing a questionnaire e-mail to each user via a network and receiving a response e-mail from each user; a volunteer fund collecting means for adding volunteer funds each time a response e-mail to the questionnaire is received from a user; a fund donation means for performing the procedure of donating the collected volunteer funds to a predetermined co-sponsoring volunteer group; a questionnaire-collecting/analyzing means for collecting and analyzing the questionnaire mails received from the users and for storing the necessary information in an information database; and a cause-related marketing cooperation function for forwarding the questionnaire mails to friends, acquaintances, and the like.

Alerting Abstract WO A2

NOVELTY - An incentive is provided to a customer during the purchase transaction if the identification received during the purchase of goods corresponds to the customer identification recorded during fuel purchase. The customer identification is recorded when the customer purchases fuel at a fuel pump.

DESCRIPTION - The fuel pump, geographically distinct from a retailer, includes a transaction terminal for transacting payment for fuel. The customer is provided with an indication of a purchase incentive at the fuel pump. An INDEPENDENT CLAIM is also included for a computer implemented system for promoting purchases of goods from retailers.

USE - Used for promoting purchases of goods from retailers. Used for automatically cross marketing and cross promoting, between diverse and physically separate retailers, product categories which retail customers perceive to be unrelated to purchases currently being made.

ADVANTAGE - Enables enticing and inducing customers purchasing one category of product to purchase other products from physically separated retailers. Broadens the customer's perception of a retailer's breadth of offerings from physically separated locations and facilities. Provides incentives for current customers of a retailer to use other retail facilities operated or promoted by the retailer.

DESCRIPTION OF DRAWINGS - The figure shows the block diagram of the interconnections between the components of a point of sale system in a retailer, the incentive processor and the fuel pump processor.
